THE STORY OF MY LIFE. By Hann Cumington Andersen. As they's Edition. 12mo. pp. 569. Herd & Houghton. If any reader of this genial biography shall find fault with the incomparable frankness and sim-plicity of the narrative, it will be owing to the perver-sion of his own taste by the unwholesome high-spiced sensational productions of the day, rather than to any tack of due reserve on the part of the author. It certainly is not in the usual style of personal conwriter, and had it been of Angle-Saxon origin, could hardly have escaped the charge of overweening egotism. But it leaves no such impression as coming from the lips of Hans Christian Andersen, whose transparent natural-noss of character leads him to revelations of private experience that are as little repulsive in their effect as the artless prattle of a child. He seems never to doubt a moment the interest of his readers in the freest sures of his history, and relates the events own life with as much naïveté as if he eribing the adventures of a third person. Nor has his experience been destitute of incidents emimently worthy of recital. The admirers of his writings will take a deep interest in his account of their composiinfluences from which they received their ad of his intercourse with several of the most eminen he has recorded the impressions in a series of attractive pictures. The volume now issued by the American pubishers contains the whole of the autobiography which has been previously translated into English, together with several original chapters, which bring the narrative nearly down to the present date, and which are here translated and published for the first time. It not only forms an appropriate supplement to the American edition of the author's writings, but is a work of delightful interest in itself, combining the charms of an attractive journal of foreign travel and a winning narrative of

THE TWO EROTHERS, AND OTHER POEMS. By EDWARD BERKE BICKEDSTREE. 12mo. pp. 324. Robers Cartee & Brothers.

The author of these poems, who is a clergyman of the evangelical faith in the Church of England. is known to a large circle of renders in this country, by his recent visit to the United States, as well as by the elaborate epic in which he attempts to embody the articles of his religious creed in the embelishments of melodious verse. The success of that "great poem," as it is stylen to the editor of the present relume, has been remarkable. More than twenty thousand copies of it have been sold in this coun try, and it still continues to attract the attention of widely different classes. Of a less ambitious character is the collection here offered to the public, consisting of various minor poems of the author, many of them fugitive pieces that have been scattered by the wayside, while others are University prize poetas, occasional effusions of fancy and sentiment, and hymns marked by a deep glow of religious feeling, and adapted to the purposes of private and public worship. They will interest the readers of the larger work, especially, as the earlier and preparatory compositions of a poet who was afterwards to essay so daring a flight into the regions of the empyrean. As a matter of course, they exhibit very unequal degrees of merit, but they all betray a profound sentiment of devotion, and several the genuine spirit of poetry. "The Two Brothers," with which the volume commences, is an interesting piece of narrative poetry, relating a dark experience of sin and sorrow; "Undine in Music" is a lively and graceful production, illustrating the power of musical expression; "Lines to a Suffering Sister" are rich in domestic ten-derness and affectionate pathos; and there are two or three spirited translations from Körner, the first of which happily relieves the solemnity of the Church militant by the sonorous clang of secular arms.

The Yosemite Guide-Book, a very thorough description of the Yosemite Valley and the adjacent region of the Sierra Nevada, with two maps, by J. D. WHITNEY, the State geologist of California, is issued in a neat portable volume, by Little, Brown, & Co.

An edition of The Fight at Dame Europa's School, with a variety of original illustrations by TROMAS NAST, has been published by Francis B. Pelt & Co. The illustrations are in the happiest comic humor of the versatile artist, and in themselves form an admirable etady of recent European political history

Chadwick's Base Ball Manual, by HENRY CHADWICK (American News Company), is a new work by one of the principal authorities on the subject in this country, forming an appropriate supplement to his preby the votaries of the great national game in the United States. It contains a variety of original matter, not to be found in the other books of the author, while it embraces most of the specialties of which they treat, and at the same time presents the latest points of the game, as developed in the leading professional trials of skill during the past season. The little volume is of a convenient form to carry in the pocket, and furnishes a use ful handy-book of reference, in case of any disputes or differences of opinion that may occur in the field.

The Wonders of the Heavens, by CAMILLE KION, translated from the French by Mrs. Non-MAN LOCKNER (Charles Scribner & Co.), is a popular ex- | advertently omitted the title of Mr. Henny C. Carey's position of the facts of astronomy, bringing the subject within the range of general comprehension, and abounding in poetical illustrations as well as in scientific scriptions. One of the chief obstacles to the knowledge of the starry heavens is the difficulty of bringing their sublime laws within the reach of the imagination. The present work, with others of a similar character which have been brought out by the publishers of this volume, furnishes a valuable aid in the study of the wondrous science which reveals the unity of the Earth and the Heavens, and will form an important element in the education of the people. Its wealth of illustration is never at the expense of scientific exactness, and th stimulus which it gives to the fancy helps to deepen and confirm its impressions on the intellect.

Lawyer and Client, by WILLIAM ALLEN BUT-LER (D. Appleton & Co.), is the title of a seasonable dis course on the professional conduct and responsibility of course on the professional conduct and responsibility of the Bar, and the mutual relation of authors and clients, originally delivered before the Law School of the New-York University. Mr. Butler makes a very clear state-ment of the rule that the lawyer must not be the pro-moter of litigation. The stirring up of lawsuits has moter of litigation. The stirring up of lawsuits has always been under the ban of a sound public opinion; and has repeatedly been the subject of express statutory prohibition. Nor is it sufficient that the counsel does prohibition. Nor is it sufficient that the counsel doe not urge an appeal to law in cases of dispute. He is bound to dissuade his elient from commencing suit whenever it is not called for by actual necessity. This rule is of wide application. It extends to the con-duct of a cause as well as its commencement. Sharp practice, however pleasing to a certain class of clients, s no part of a lawyer's duty. The wishes of a client are no excuse for false pleas or snap judgments. Equally inflexible is the rule, as laid down by Mr. Butler, tha the lawyer should never aid a client in doing an illegal act in such a manner as to evade the law or to escape its consequences. The lawyer has no right to make himself an accessory before the fact to crime or injustice. But while the lawyer represents the legal rights of his elient, he is wholly separated, according to Mr. Butler, from his standing in his moral or social relations. With regard to the means of reducing the number of "bad judges and unscrupulous lawyers," the author suggests that an enlightened sense of personal responsibility is the only remedy for the evils which weigh so heavily upon society at the present time. He makes no reference to individual cases of judicial or professional dishonor, but confines himself to the great ethical principles which are of universal application.

The Journal of John Woolman (James R. Osgood & Co.) has long been known to the funciers of original and curious forms of human experience as a piece of autobiographical composition, delightful for its frankness and simplicity, and revealing under the quaint garb of Quaker austerity, a touching gentleness of spirit in unison with the sternest convictions of duty. Woolman was a native of New-Jersey, having been bern in Burlington County, in the year 1720. At an early period of his life, he became deeply interested in the subject of American Slavery, and in common with other members of the Society of Friends, felt constrained to "atter his testimony" against the institution. It seemed to him "as a dark gloominess overhanging the land," and for the remainder of his life he devoted himself mainly to the work of accomplishing its abolition. The larger portion of his writings which Charles Lamb advised his friends "to get by heart," are devoted to an exposition of the evils of Slavery, of uncompensated labor, and the excessive tell and suffering of the many to support th luxury of the few. His appeals were always without bitterness, free from violent personal denunciation, and pervaded by a spirit of tender charity. They aimed to reach the heart of the slaveholder through the medium of the intellect, and to produce conviction without arousing passion. "To the slaveholders of his time," says Mr. Whittier, in his admirable preface to the volume, "they must have seemed like the voice of conscience speaking to them in the cool of the day. The style is that of to them in the cost of the day, —The style is that of a man unlettered, but with natural refinement and delicate sense of fitness, the purity of whose heart enters into his language. There is no attempt at fine writing, not a word or phrase for effect; it is the simple unadorned distion of one to whom the temptations of the pen seem to have been wholly unknown. He wrote as he believed from an inward spiritual prompting, and with all his unaffected humility he evidently felt that his work was done in the clear radiance of "the light which never was

A Visit to My Discontented Cousin (Roberts Brothers) is the reprint of an English work in which under a thin veil of fiction, the discussion of several topics of current interest is agreeably combined with a slight narrative, somewhat in the manner of Arthur Helps, but without the subtle refinement and graceful ease of that suggestive and delightful writer. The ques tions that are brought upon the carpet often possess good deal of interest, and occasionally call forth remarks from the interlocutors in the little drams that are worthy of note. Among other subjects, the present state of English poetry comes up for consideration, and the oracle which led to their production. Andersen cherishes a of the party expresses his belief that the living poets of literary creation. He has made frequent visits to the mysticism and dreamy analysis of thought which seem chief capitals of Europe, most of which he pleasantly de- to be considered subline in proportion to its difficulty of soribes in these memoirs. His acquaintance with the most | comprehension. The "fine frenzy" of the poet threatens ebrated authors of the century has been extensive, to become downright insanity. When "imagination dof his intercourse with several of the most culnent bodies forth the form of things funseen," the last thing the bard newadays thinks of doing is to give them a "local habitation or a name." He leaves them just where he found them, and calls them by no name which any one but himself understands. There is a good open ing, it is intimated, for a genuine, manly poet. The Lanreate fills his place with power, but even of Tennyson it must be said that he is always greatest when most intelligible. There are some good paragraphs on music, though it is regarded in the fashionable circles of the hour, as "the nurderer of love, the bane of innocent fliration, and the exacting and wear some tyrant of the evening." The writer seems to fall in with this opinion, and rather vehemently expresses his resentment at being compelled to listen, and told to hold his tongue, when he is just in for a good talk. His tastes, however, are of no great consequence, nor his opinions generally worth quoting; but though his book is superficial in texture, and never burdensome by its weight of thought, it will doubtless afford a pleasant recreation to many readers on a Summer afternoon in the country. .

Calvinism, by JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE (Charles Scribner & Co.), makes no pretensions to being a dogmatic defense of the deftly wrought steel-ciad theological system contained in the "Institutes" of Calvin, and the Westminster Catechism, but aims to exhibit the foundation in philosophy and the nature of man to which it owes its vigor and vast influence over society and the individual. The secret of its strength is to be sought in its its recognition of the supremacy of law in the government of the Calvinism was the spirit which universe. in revolt against untruth. It arose from the inflashing upon the conscience of the laws, which exist independent of the human will, inherent, like the law of gravity, in the nature of things, which man did not make, and which man cannot change, but which he must discover and obey, at the risk of his everlasting peril. The moral law is the expression of the Supreme Will, in the view of Mr. Froude, and bears the stamp of Eternity. The spirit in man which corresponds to the Eternal Spirit is part of its essence, and immortal as it is immortal. The Calvinists called the Inner Light the Inspiration of the Almighty. Aristotle could see that it was not of earth, or any creature of space or time. "What the thing is," says Mr. Froude, "which we call ourselves we know not. It may be true-I for one care not if it be-that the descent of our mortal bodies may be traced through an ascending series to some glutinous jelly formed on the rocks of the primeval ocean. It is nothing to me how the Maker of me has been pleased to construct the organized substance which I call my body. It is mine, but it is not me. The intellectual spirit, being an essence, we believe to be an imperishable something which has been engendered in us from another source." The manner in which Mr. Froude traces this spiritual construction of Calvinism, in its influence on society through the lapse of ages is marked by equal boldness and ingenuity. His treatment of the subject is rich in historical illustrations, and often gives rise to passages of splendid, though ragged, eloquence. In spite of its ambiguous title, his book must be numbered among the elements of fermentation in modern thought, and as such, will renew the interest which attaches to the earlier productions of the author

LITERARY NOTES.

An essay has been published in Cincinnati designed to show the plan and object of the "Great Pyra-mid of Jirch."

"Social Selence," which has passed through two editions in a Russian translation, and is highly appreciated by the political economists of that country.

Mr. Charles Carroll, an accomplished scholar and journalist of this city, who has recently returned from a protracted residence in Europe, has received the appointment of Professor of the Prench and German languages and literature in the University of New-York, and will immediately enter upon the discharge of his official duties.

A dramatic sketch, by George Eliet, will apfortheoming number of Macmillan's Magazine. Prof. Haidinger, one of the most eminent of the European mineralogists, has recently died at Vienna Richard Wagner's new composition, entitled Kaisermarsch," in honor of the German victory, and of the revival of the Empire and of the Imperial power, has been published in Leipsic.

Mrs. Henry Wood, the English novelist, is re-ported to have realized not less than £20,000 by the sale of her sensational stories, which at first she could not in-duce any publisher to look at. M. Jan van Beers, the best known and, both in Helland and Belgium, the most popular of the living Flemish poets, has just published, at Amsterdam, a new volume of poems under the title of "Gevoel en leven."

The hundredth anniversary of Heinrich Zschokke's birthday has been celebrated at Magdeburg, the birthplace of the poet. A bust of the poet was pub-licly uncovered, and a discourse on the life of the filus-trious writer was delivered by Dr. Uhlieh.

Alessandro Manzoni, the celebrated author of the "Promessi Sposi," forms the subject of a monograph by Prof. C. M. Sauer of Prague, in which the author points out the important place which he considers is held in literature by the Italian writer and poet.

The arrangements for the Friday evening lectures at the Royal Institution in London, have been issued. The lecturers are Prof. Blackle, Prof. Odling, W. R. S. Raiston, M. A. Cambridge, Prof. Huxley, Col. Jervols, R.E. C.E., Sir J. Lubbock, Bart., Prof. T. Andrews, and Prof. Tyndall.

The recent failure of Pierre Jules Hetzel, the rell known Parisian publisher, is reported to have caused serious losses to George Sand, Théophile Gautier, Arsène Houssaye, and other distinguished French authors. Hetzel had been established in Paris since 1835, and was supposed to be very wealthy. His failure is attributed to the war. A movement is said to be on foot in Madrid to observe the anniversary of the birthday of Cervantes, and next October an effort will be made to colebrate the occasion by a dinner of the literary men and journalists of the capital. It is not generally remembered, by the by, that Cervantes and Shakespeare died on the same day of the month, April 23. Petermann's Mittheilungen for January con-ists of an account of the German North Pole Expedition in the Germania, by Capt. Koldewy and Dr. A. Peternann. The pack ice impeded their progress; but on September 14, 1863, they reached lat. 81° t'. The eastern coast of Spitzbergen was visited, and a new island discovered, which has been named William Island.

Prof. W. G. Brill of Utrecht is preparing a new edition of the "Voyage of St. Brandaen," one of the most remarkable remains of sacred poetry of the Middle Netheriands. The fantastic descriptions recall the super-natural element of the remances of the Round Table. The only edition that has hitherto appeared of this au-cient poem, which probably belongs to the thirteenth century, or even an earlier time, is one by M. Blommaert of Ghent.

A London correspondent says it is almost impossible now to induce any publisher in that city to ac-cept a manuscript which severely criticises or ridicules he manners and customs of this country; not perhaps rom any particular good feeling toward America, but ecause so many such ventures have proved financial alttres. At the same time books of travel honestly decriptive of the cities and people of the United States are eported to be in demand.

SECOND BOARD, 1 P. M. Soles of State Roads-Railr

THURSDAY, May 4-P. M.

Speculation in stocks continues tame, and vithout any features of sufficient interest to re-The inclemency of the weather, and the fact that the ciand Convention took up no new matters relative to Lake Shere, has dampened the arder of operators, and the market appears to be left to take care of itself, which it is doing in a praiseworthy manner. In no parscular stock has there been any notable movement, busiess being limited throughout the list, though well dis tributed between New-York Central stock and scrip-Reading, Lake Shore, Ohio and Mississippi, North-Western Common and Preferred, Rock Island, St. Paul, and Western Union Telegraph. The other prominent shares were neglected, the business in investment and dividend-paying stocks being limited, as will be seen by reference to the official list printed at the head of the column. The miscellaneous shares were steady, and express steeks quiet and firm. The market has been steady throughout the day, the fluctuations cing confined within narrow limits, as shown in the following table of the highest and lowest prices of active stocks for the day :

At the close, round mounts were left with the boad houses as low as 3. Washington dispatches, yesterday, to the effect that the Controller of the Currency has called for a statement of the condition of the banks, last Saturday, seem to have been premature, as nothing has been heard of it officially by the banks here. Prime mercantile paper moves readily at 5263 per cent.

Government bonds have been dull, in sympathy with the other markets, and barely steady in tone. Fisk & Hatch report as follows at 4 p. m.:

State bonds were moderately traded in, the transac-

THE SIX PER CENT GOLD BONDS OF THE CHESA-PEAKE AND ONIO RAILBOAD Co. are secured upon a property, which, when the extension to the Ohio River, now in process of rapid construction, is completed and fully equipped, will represent a cost of nearly $30,000,000, and an actual value in Road, Franchises, rights of way, &c., of not less than $50,000,000. The total amount of the loan is $15,000,000, of which nearly one-half, or over $7,000,000, have already been

The CENTRAL PACIFIC BONDS negotiated by as, amounting to $25,885,000, have a ready market everywhere, being favorably known and actively dealt in at all the principal Stock Exchanges of this country and Europe, and are readily salable at all times at quoted market price, which is now above par. The Bonds of the CHESAPEARE AND OBIO RAIL

ROAD Co. we believe to be of equal value and se envity, and must in time take a like rank in market value and salable character. Holders of Five-Twenty Bonds, desiring to fund them otherwise than in the New Five Per Cent Gevernment Loan, may do so with entire safety, at a profit of about 20 per cent, and without reduction of interest, by an exchange for the Bonds of the Chesa-PEAKE AND OTHO RAILBOAD CO. Present price 90, and accrued interest from May 1.

We also buy and sell Government Scentities, and the Bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Co., and as Agents of the U.S. Government, will attend to the funding of 5-20s into the new U.S. Bends. FISH & HATCH.

INVESTMENT SECURITIES.

To parties seeking perfectly safe and remomerative investments, we especially commend the First MORTGAGE BONDS of the NORTHERN PACIFIC RAIL-ROAD COMPANY. These bonds are payable in gold at the expiration of thirty years, with interest, payable in gold semi-annually, at the rate of 73-10 per annum, and are a first and only mortgage upon the Road, its rolling stock and franchises, and also upon a valuable land-grant of 22,000 acres permile of road. Maps and pamphlets fully descriptive of this Road and its bonds can be obtained of JAY COOKE & Co., Fiscal Agents N. P. R. R., No. 20 Wall-st., New-York,

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy has given a traffic guarantee, and obligates itself to invest in these bonds 50 per cent of the gross earnings derived from all business from this road. This is sufficient indication of the estimate of the enterprise by the largest and most far-sighted corporation in the West. Price 90 and accrued interest in currency. Pamphlets and full particulars furnished on application. HENRY CLEWS & Co., 32 Wall-st.

We are informed that Messrs. Clews, Hantour & Co., the London branch of Messrs. Hexny Clews & Co. of this city, have vacated their old quarters at No. 5 Lothbury. London, and taken the elegant and commodions offices formerly occupied by the National Bank of Scotland, at No. 11 Old Broad-st.

The evidence thus afforded of their increasing prosperity will gratify their many friends in this city.

M. K. Jesup & Com'y have removed from 12 Pringst, to Marquand Buildings, 59 Liberty-st., near Nassau.
